

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention deals with a process for the preparation of a polymeric relief structure via electromagnetic radiation. In the process a compound is used that reduces the interfacial tension of the coated substrate. As a result the aspect ratio as well as the curvature of the surface are enhanced, and therefore are beneficial for optical components and for replication purposes.